Provide the total proof gallons of spirits that can be produced daily

12.8

Describe the step by step production procedure used to produce spirits from an original source. Begin with the treating, mashing, or fermenting of the raw materials and continue through each step of the distilling, purifying and refining process, until production is complete

Our operation will source corn directly from farmers, with sugar and yeast procured from wholesalers. The corn will be washed and sanitized using a hot water bath and then cooked in a separate warm water solution to break down starches and prepare for fermentation. The solution will be separated from any unwanted residue and mixed with sugar and yeast. The solution will be added to sanitized 5 gallon plastic buckets with airtight seals, with an airlock installed to facilitate the anaerobic fermentation process (approximately 5-14 days). Once the fermentation process is over, the solution will be strained and transferred to an 8 gallon, stainless-steel still. Using a column still and condenser, the liquid will be heated from 140-160 degrees Fahrenheit until a low boiling point distillate foreshot (i.e. methanol) is removed. The temperature will then be raised to 173 degree. From the 173-185 degree range we will make our 'head' cut. As our temperature is raised to 205 degrees, we will make subsequent cuts, all at approximately 80% alcohol by volume. Once we have collected each cut (measured using graduated flask) and are finished with our distillation process we will then dilute the cuts to 40% alcohol by volume, measuring alcohol content with a hydrometer, and storing solution in sanitized storage containers. We will then begin the aging process with charred oak. Once the aging process is completed, we will then measure alcohol content to maintain 40% alcohol content and strain the aged whiskey into 750mL glass bottles. We will ensure proper labeling, and send out to be shipped direct to consumer (in Nebraska

Describe how bulk spirits will be stored

Bulk spirits will immediately be diluted to 40% alcohol by volume and transferred to containers to be aged using charred oak. These containers will be stored in a locked container on the bonded premises. Once the aging process is done, the solution will be transferred to approved shipping containers, labeled, and prepared for shipping immediately. All of these bottles will be and locked on the bonded premises until shipped. Due to the low volume of each customer's order and quick shipments, we do not realistically expect to store more than 20 proof gallons at a time.

Provide the bulk storage capacity (in gallons)

40

Describe the storage system for spirits bottled and cased or otherwise packaged and placed in approved containers for removal from bonded premises

Once spirits are transferred to bottles, the bottles will be sealed, labeled, and placed in proper shipping boxes. These boxes will be labeled and stored in a locked storage shelf on the bonded premises until removed for shipping.

Will spirits be redistilled?

No

Company Structure

Flyover Whiskey will be operating (DBA) under the Limited Liability Company of Huffman Prairie Ventures, LLC. Huffman Prairie Ventures, LLC is a sole-member LLC with Andrew Minarick as the sole owner and operator.

Overview

Flyover Whiskey will turn Nebraska Grain Farmers' corn into custom, high-quality whiskey products.

While many distillery operations focus on bulk production and large distribution channels, Flyover Whiskey will focus on a small, niche approach. My company will allow farmers to send in some of their grain, which will then be turned into a mash, distilled, and bottled in custom-labeled bottles that list the region and operation that provided the grain for the mash ingredients. We will then ship these whiskey products directly to the consumer, providing an easy, cheap way to enjoy 'farm-grown' products.

Problem

Farmers are often accustomed to watching many of their products become commoditized, resulting in a disconnect from the tangible nature of their profession, both for themselves and consumers across the state. There are few ways in which farmers can enjoy the fruits of their labor in real, novel ways.

Furthermore, consumers desire to know where their food-related products come from. For many companies, it is not economically feasible to cater to this desire as the food-related supply chains increase in complexity as these operations seek to reach economies of scale.

Opportunity

There is a growing trend among consumers that prefer Farm-to-Fork products. Consumers want to know where their food and drink comes from, but complex supply chains make tracing the origin of these products difficult. There is a growing desire for these consumers to see the origin and story behind what they eat and drink. As the 'Farm-to-Fork' trend continues, Flyover Whiskey hopes to use that driver to develop a similar 'Farm-to-Glass' model.

Customer Segments, Value Propositions, Channels

Customer Segment #1 (Main): Grain Farmers

Value Proposition:

- Pride in Custom Whiskey from Farming Operation, Affordable Pricing, Ease of Use

Channels/Marketing:

- Personal Contacts, Social Media, Farm-Related Advertising

Customer Segment #2 (Secondary): Consumers wanting to connect with local farms

Value Proposition:

- Access to products sourced from friends or farms they know

Channels/Marketing:

- Personal Contacts, Social Media

Revenue Structure

Flyover Whiskey will charge a flat fee of $250 per order that will include shipping and processing. This will yield eight, 750 mL bottles of 35% corn whiskey.

Whiskey Production Process

My operation will source corn directly from farmers, with sugar and yeast procured from wholesalers. The corn will be washed and sanitized using a hot water bath and then cooked in a separate warm water solution to break down starches and prepare for fermentation. The solution will be separated from any unwanted residue and mixed with sugar and yeast. The solution will be added to sanitized 5-gallon plastic buckets with airtight seals, with an airlock installed to facilitate the anaerobic fermentation process (approximately 5-14 days). Once the fermentation process is over, the solution will be strained and transferred to an 8 gallon, stainless-steel still. Using a column still and condenser, the liquid will be heated from 140-160 degrees Fahrenheit until all low boiling point distillate foreshot (i.e. methanol) is removed. The temperature will then be raised to 173 degrees. From the 173 to 185 degree range we will make our 'head' cut. As our temperature is raised to 205 degrees, we will make subsequent cuts, all at approximately 80% alcohol by volume. Once we have collected each cut (measured using graduated flask) and are finished with our distillation process, we will then dilute the cuts to 40% alcohol by volume, measuring alcohol content with a hydrometer, and storing solution in sanitized storage containers. We will then begin the aging process with charred oak. Once the aging process is completed, we will then measure alcohol content to maintain 35-40% alcohol content and strain the aged whiskey into 750mL glass bottles. We will ensure proper labeling and send out to be shipped direct to consumer (in Nebraska).

Team and Background

Andrew holds a degree in Biological Systems Engineering, with minors in Agribusiness Entrepreneurship and Biomedical Engineering (University of Nebraska-Lincoln). He was born and raised surrounded by agriculture in North Bend, NE and has experience founding and growing a software startup company, where he lead product development teams to create a microfinance platform. Andrew has also spent time working as a Process Engineer for a Fortune 250 company where he helped develop, fund, and implement new technology in the manufacturing sector.

During his undergraduate studies, Andrew has taken several years of General Chemistry, Biology, Organic Chemistry, and Biochemistry, all of which consisted of rigorous coursework and hands on laboratory experience, including solution purification via distillation methods. He has extensive experience managing data, creating accounting systems, and working with regulatory bodies to maintain compliance.

He is confident his background and experience will help him operate a micro-distillery in a safe and effective manner.
